

POOR THING

Avery, Jieyi, Edward

Laboratory (birth)
Lisbon (first know the world)
Paris (power and pleasure)
Alexandria (freedom and growth)

Laboratory

This space is one of the most important scenes in the film, not only as Dr. Godwin's laboratory, but also as Bella's “birthplace”. The layout of the laboratory lies somewhere between the scientific , with a large number of glass containers, floating organs, and a dissection table reinforcing its gothic science fiction style. At the same time, the dark interior of the lab symbolizes Dr. Godwin's control over Bella, who is given a new life here, but is still confined.

Lisbon

Bella leaves London for the first time and arrives in Lisbon, a more open environment compared to London, with rich colors, bright light and architecture with a strong southern European flavor. This visual contrast suggests a shift in her state of mind - from passive acceptance to active exploration. Lisbon's markets, cafes and busy streets symbolize the allure and novelty of the outside world.

Paris

Bella enters a more symbolic world of "play" where she experiences wealth, pleasure and social hierarchy. The decorations of the Parisian houses, the banquet halls, the mirrors and the crystal chandeliers all have an atmosphere of extreme luxury but deliberate ostentation, as if it were a satire of the real world.

Alexandria

Bella's arrival in Alexandria, with its crumbling buildings and warm, dusty tones, symbolizes a more authentic, primitive existence than the previous two cities. Bella finds a certain freedom here, in contrast to her previous captivity in the “civilized world”.

The first half of the movie takes place mostly in London, and the house where Bella is staying is filled with Victorian decor, but also with lab equipment such as levitating jars and dissecting instruments, a mix that makes the space both familiar and eerie.

COLOR

In the early part of the film, London is more cold and monotonous, while in the later part of the film, after Bella leaves home and begins to explore the world, the images become more vibrant and dreamy, such as the blue-violet tones of Lisbon and the warm yellow tones of Alexandria. This color change also symbolizes Bella's movement from a controlled environment into a world of self-awakening.

Costume Design

HOLLY WADDINGTON

Aside from fashion plates of the 19th century and even “early 20th century” and “’60s fashion,” Waddington also looked to specific art movements, “particularly modernist sort of early 20th century German Expressionism. That's where I got all the color palette ideas from. I looked at lots of nature.” And like an experimental scientist herself, Waddington also looked to scientific drawings and sketches, “[German Zoologist] Ernst Haeckel did these very detailed drawings of shells and seaweed,” she explained. “The plants all have this very beautiful living quality to them, so it's a really interesting texture.”

POOR THINGS
EMMA STONE
MARK RUFFALO
WILLEM DAFOE
RAMY YOUSSEF
JERROD CARMICHAEL

Rarely in film do characters go through such a gamut of looks. But then, rarely do characters travel from grown woman to toddler to grown woman again all in two hours and 21 minutes. The costumes match Bella, played with abandon by Emma Stone, step for step, beating a frenetic path from infant to fully grown via babydoll dresses, joyful, frothy ruffles, enormous sleeves and forgotten or discarded trousers, before moving into sensible, protective coats and more serious medical-student monochrome.

SHONA HEATH

Shona Heath was born in British in May 1974. She is an art director and set designer. Her work has encompassed prop-building, painting, paper-sculpting, photography, film making art-directing and more.

EDUCATION

Alice Ottley School

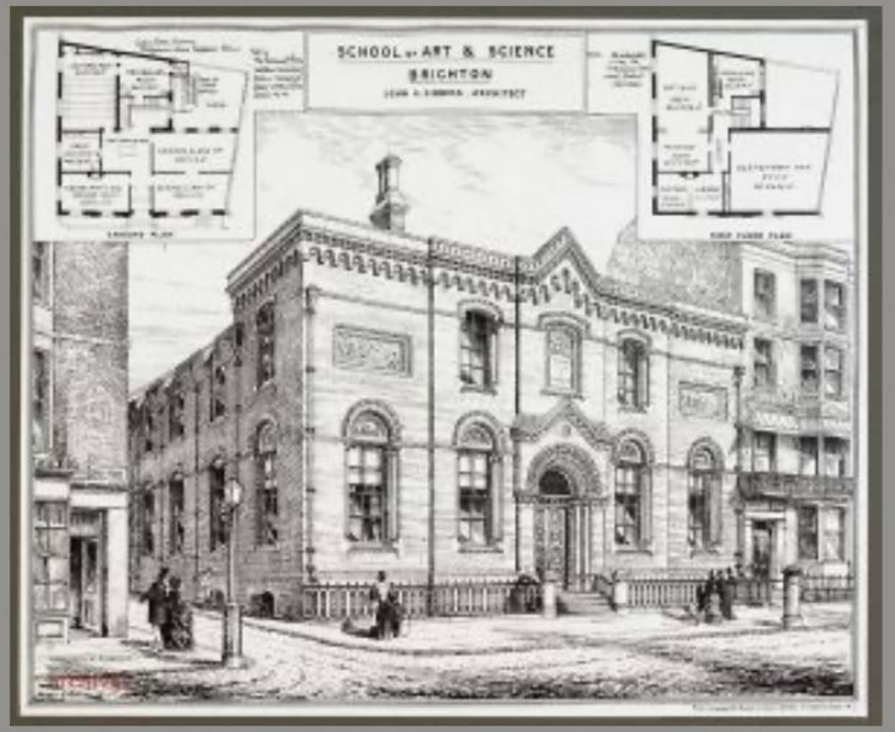

Art, design, textiles, fashion, and French

University of Cheltenham and Gloucester

Art and design

Brighton University

Fashion and textiles, graduated in 1997

WORK EXPERIENCE

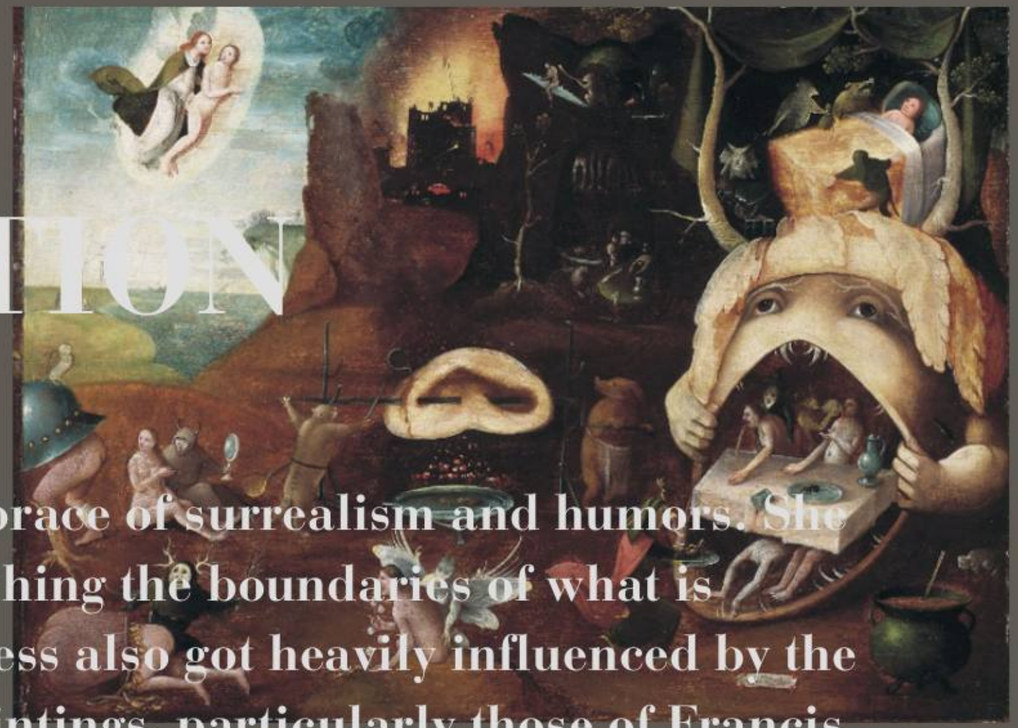

1997–Early 2000s: Beginnings
Started as a freelance set designer, working on small-scale projects

2000s: Breakthrough and Rise to Fame
Collaborated with photographer Tim Walker, creating fantastical sets for fashion editorials in magazines like Vogue, W, and Love.
Gained recognition in the fashion editorial world, becoming a renowned set designer.

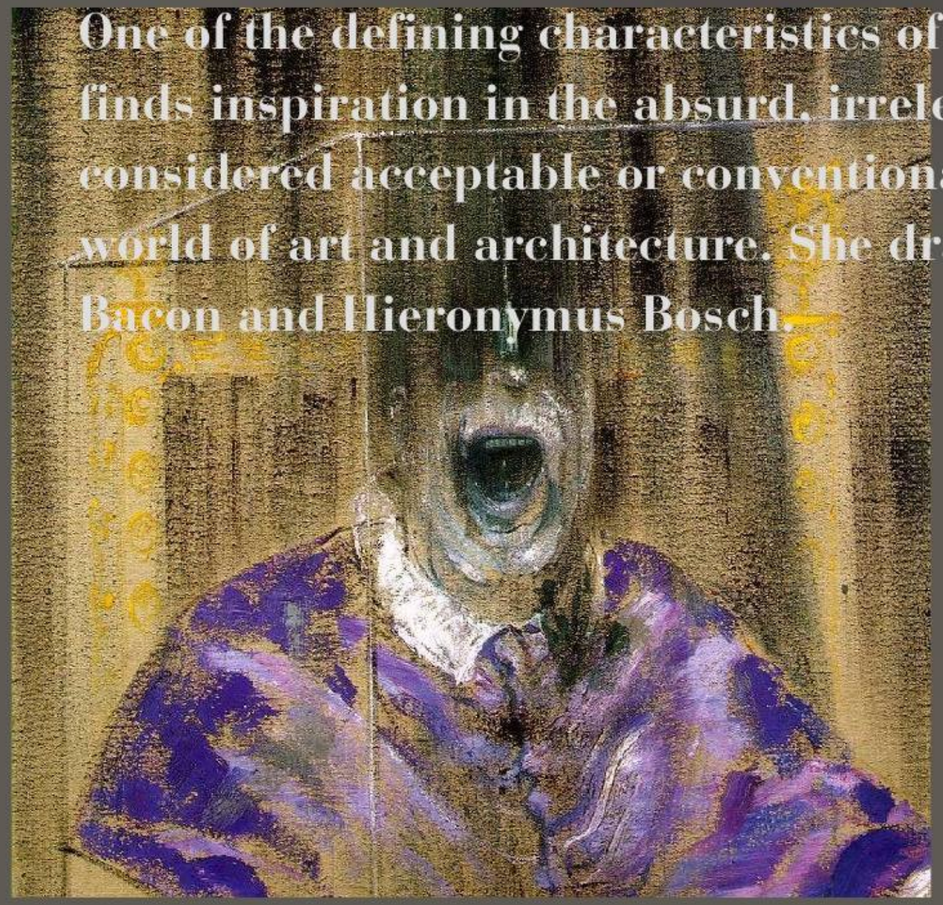

2010s: Diversification
Worked with luxury brands (e.g., Gucci, Louis Vuitton, Mulberry) on advertising campaigns and fashion projects.
Expanded into film and music videos, contributing to short films and music video sets.
Her work was exhibited at institutions like the Victoria and Albert Museum (V&A).

2020s–Present: Continued Innovation
Continues to collaborate with Tim Walker and other creatives, maintaining a high level of creative output.
Further ventures into film, exploring larger-scale set designs.
Known for her surreal, handmade, and imaginative style, solidifying h status as an industry leader.

STYLE AND INSPIRATION

One of the defining characteristics of Heath's work is her embrace of surrealism and humors. She finds inspiration in the absurd, irrelevant, and even silly, pushing the boundaries of what is considered acceptable or conventional. Heath's creative process also got heavily influenced by the world of art and architecture. She draws inspiration from paintings, particularly those of Francis Bacon and Hieronymus Bosch.

LOUIS VUITTON

Dior
SECRET GARDEN 2 - VERSAILLES

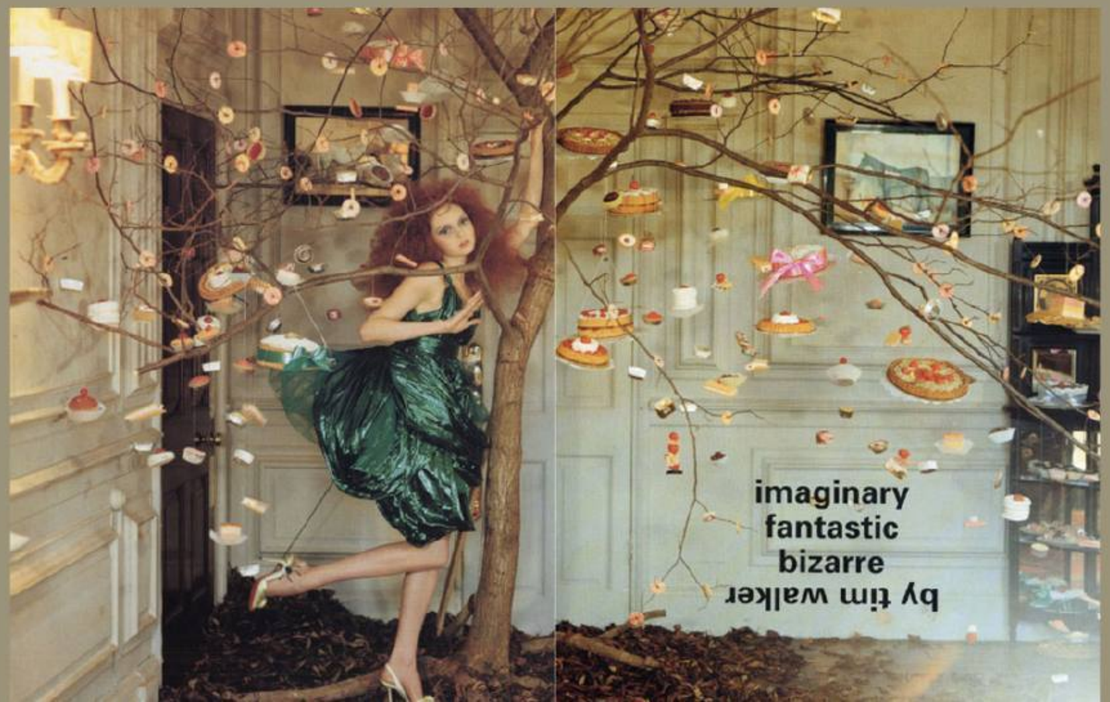

HERMES
LE MONDE D'HERMÈS Printemps-Été 2009

miu miu

RED
VALENTINO

MULBERRY

imaginary
fantastic
bizarre
by tim walker

UTOMNE - HIVER 2008/9

As a Production Designer: She was the Production Designer for Poor Things, which won the Academy Award for Best Production Design at the 96th Academy Awards on March 10th. In addition, she has worked on several films and shorts such as Eye Ear You (2022), Jo Malone London's promotional short Follw Us To Lavenderland (2020), and The Magic Paintbrush (2016).

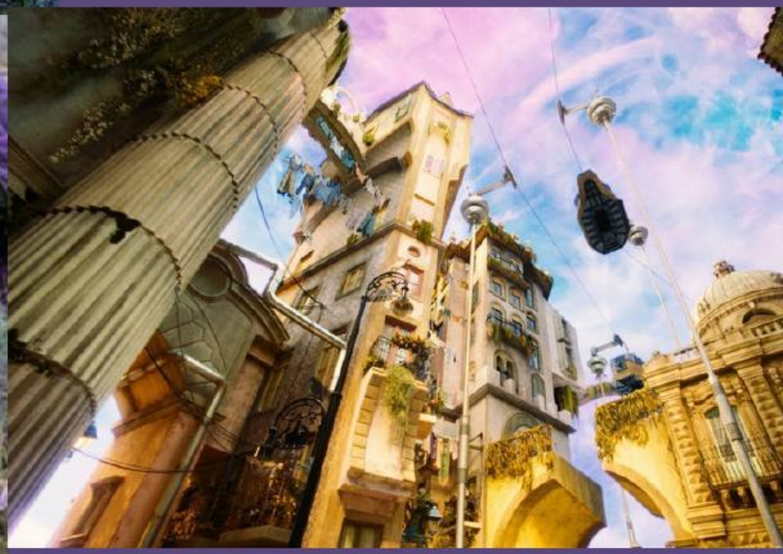

Shona Heath's designs are instantly recognizable due to her unique visual signature and recurring elements:

1. Surreal and Dreamlike Aesthetics
Her designs often create otherworldly, fantastical environments that blur the line between reality and imagination.
2. Handcrafted and Intricate Details
She's really pay attention on the details. She often incorporates handmade props and textures, such as fabric, and painted backdrops.
3. Nature-Inspired Elements
She frequently integrates organic and natural motifs into her designs, such as flowers, trees and animals.
These elements are often exaggerated or surreal, like oversized blooms or fantastical creatures.
4. Playful Scale and Proportion
She often manipulates scale in her work, enlarging or minimizing objects or elements like a tiny furniture in a huge landscape or a large flower in a small room.

BUDGET

IT ALSO BECAME A BOX OFFICE SUCCESS, GROSSING OVER $117 MILLION WORLDWIDE ON A BUDGET OF $35 MILLION, BECOMING LANTHIMOS' HIGHEST-GROSSING FILM.

THE PRINCIPAL PHOTOGRAPHY FOR POOR THINGS TOOK PLACE FROM AUGUST 2021 TO DECEMBER 2021 IN HUNGARY.

Citation page

https://www.businessoffashion.com/people/shona-heath/https:/www.hannahmariashanahan.com/post/the-surreal-and-whimsical-world-of-shona-heathhttps:/shonaheath.comhttps:/www.imdb.com/name/nm4257419/
https://imfirenzedigest.com/2024/02/02/poor-things-costumes-a-fashionistas-guide/